Lambda State Convention Book Discussions

The following two books have been chosen by the Lambda State Literacy Committee for the book discussions at the Lambda State Convention, April 24-26, 2015, at the Westin Lombard Yorktown Center in Lombard, IL. They are The Fault in Our Stars, by John Green and The Rector's Wife, by Joanna Trollope. I hope you will read them (if you haven't already) and participate in the book discussions. I did that a couple of years ago at convention and thoroughly enjoyed the experience.

Under the Wide and Starry Sky: A Novel by Nancy Horan Reviewed by Camille Basak

Robert Louis Stevenson was a prolific poet, novelist, essayist, travel writer, and a beloved literary celebrity in the late 1800s. His most famous works include Treasure Island, Kidnapped, and The Strange Case of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde. Behind this talented man stood a woman who herself longed to be a writer, but rather served as his nurse, travel companion, editor, advisor, and wife. This woman was Fanny Van de Grift and her story is told by Nancy Horan in Under the Wide and Starry Sky: A Novel.

R.L. Stevenson fell desperately in love with this divorcee while carousing with friends on the French Riviera. Fanny was considered a rather wild and independent American who seemed to ignore many of the acceptable social mores of the times. Despite the ten-year gap in their ages, love took hold and they married. She travelled the world with him in search of a climate and environment that would mend his weakened lungs and be a source of inspiration for his writing. From the Napa Valley to the south of France to the Pacific Islands and to his homeland in Scotland, oftentimes subsisting on the generosity of beneficiaries and depending on her skill at working the land, Robert and Fanny developed friendships with the natives and explored the land and sea. During these adventures, they found many of the characters and settings for his writing and a foundation for their politics.

Fanny had an indomitable spirit and was instrumental in Stevenson's success, but never seemed to find respect for her contributions to his career, nor satisfying outlets for her own real passions which led to unbearable consequences. Horan did extensive research to capture the essence of her characters' lives, the times in which they lived, and the exotic locations where they set up house. She excites the reader with dialogue and interactions that bring them to life as real human beings experiencing the joys and disappointments that come with fame and living in someone's shadow.

I was profoundly impacted a few weeks ago during a subbing experience I had. I was working with a student with Down Syndrome whom I have worked with a few times and have a beginning relationship established. I was walking her back to class and we encountered a tiny girl in first grade sitting by her locker crying uncontrollably. My student became visibly upset, turned to me with her face and voice filled with compassion and said, "Ms. Briza, help her!" "I can get back to my class on my own." Her empathy and willingness to immediately help touched me. I can't help but think of the wonderful women in Gamma Gamma who are so caring and compassionate, willing to jump in and help, whatever the need or cause. It blesses my heart.
